High School Notes

Dorothy Feathers, Reporter

The students and faculty are recovering this week from a severe attack of Shakespearitis. Once more classes are held and lessons prepared. The stage has been stripped of its scenery, and the students can now go about with no danger of tripping over Shylock's staff or the Duke's chair. However, despite the hard work and little inconveniences everyone enjoyed preparing for the entertainment and finds it somewhat difficult to settle down.

The track meet at the high school Tuesday afternoon between the Juniors and the Sophomore-Senior resulted in a victory for the "allies," 64-50. The score was the same as in the last meet, but then the Juniors were the victors. The athletes showed much promise and should win a place in the I. A. U. track meet to be held in San Jose next Saturday.

Lyman Feathers made good time in the mile and half mile, and Downing showed up well in the sprints. Oliver Price, in the pole-vault and Bryant, in the high and broad jumps, should take places in the meet next Saturday, Jack Scott won in throwing the discus and should do well in that line in the I. A. U. meet.

Bryant won the highest number of points in the meet, 27. Downing was second with 19½, and L. Feathers, third with 14. The other points were quite evenly divided.

"Going down"

Our Athletics dropped another ball game when they met the Sunnyvale Club at Santa Clara last Sunday afternoon.

The game was easily the property of our Club but in the 5th frame things happened that good ball players always fight shy of, i. e., "balloon ascensions". Our boys all hit well. Morton, Andy Monogue and Ed. Kennedy all tucking away a 3 bagger each.

The Score

Time—2 hours.

The Athletics will journey to Santa Cruz next Sunday leaving Campbell by motor truck at 8:30 a. m. This will be a beautiful scenic trip as well as a pleasant day's outing. The truck will leave from Beall's drug store a 8:30 prompt. Fare for round trip $1.00. Those desiring to go should make reservations at once by phoning Manager Bradford, Campbell 50, or leaving word at this office.

Memorial Pageant

The Shakesperean pageant which was given by the C. U. H. S. Friday evening was probably the most pretentious entertainment attempted by them, and well-merited the praise which it has received.

The program in an abbreviated form was as follows.

I. C. U. H. S. Orchestra—Golden Glow Waltz.
II. Records on Sonora Phonograph. (Songs from various plays.)
III. Pageant of players enter singing Cornish May Song.
IV. The Mermaid Inn.
Gathering of famous writers of the day. Conservation and Music.
V. Play of Pyramus and Thisbe from "A Midsummer Night's Dream."
VI. Act IV, Scene I. "Midsummer Night's Dream."
Chorus. Solo "Heart's Ease."
Valerie De Remer
VII. Act II, Scene V, "Twelfth Night"
The Gulling of Malvolio.
Solo, "Dedemona's Willow Song"
Gladys Lowry
VIII. Act II, Scene I. "Merchant of Venice." Court Scene.
IX. Finale—"Hark, Hark the Lark!"
X. C. U. H. S. Orchestra—Demi Tasse "Castle Walk."

The orchestra numbers were heartily applauded, as they well deserved to be, for the young people have made remarkable progress this year.

Much favorable comment was also heard for the chorus and glee songs. The music has been under the supervision of Miss Wood this year, and shows great advancement.

The pageant itself was elaborate in its undertaking and well carried out. Being presented as in the Elizabethan age, the imagining of the stage sittings was a novelty to a modern audience.

The costumes were very pretty and effective; and people were much surprised to learn that they were largely of "home manufacture," only two being rented and a very few borrowed.

The only criticism to be offered was one, not of the production but of the audience. It is greatly to the discredit of our town that there is so much noise and disorder at entertainments, on the part of the younger generations, particularly. People go to things to hear as well as see, which is impossible often on account of the continual talking, shifting around from seat to seat, and throwing of things by the children. If young people can't sit together and behave it seems as tho they should be with their parents or at home, and not spoil the pleasure of every one around them.

We have made no comment on the new phonograph because no one could hear the selections on account of the noise. Many who were anxious to hear the instrument hope to have another opportunity to do so.

Annual Services

The joint observance of Mother's and Children's Days at the Congregational church Sunday proved a very pleasant plan for a change. The decorating committee had evolved a completely new and very pretty scheme, in which pink and white flowers and crepe streamers were combined with the green of smilax and ferns. Mrs. Treat of Sunnyside and Mrs. W. N. Stray of the Willows, furnished over two hundred carnations, with large bowls of pink and white sweet peas, which were all most artistically arranged.

The program was in charge of the Sunday-school and included numbers appropriate to both days, the only feature not given by members of the school was two violin solos played by Robert Scholz which were much appreciated.

An Effective Remover

Alcohol will remove grass stains from summer clothes! It will also remove summer clothes, also spring and winter clothes, not only from the man who drinks it, but also from his wife and children. It will also remove household furniture from the house, and eatables from the pantry; the smile from the face of his wife, and the happiness from the hame. As a remover of things, alcohol has no equal.—Exchange.

R. J. Billiou and G. W. Page families motored to Santa Cruz Sunday for a dip in the briny. Mr. Billiou said there were as many as 500 autos parked along the beach streets and the trip home was a regular parade.

The M. E. Sunday-school enjoyed its annual picnic Saturday. A large representation of the church and Sunday-school went by street car and auto and the day proved a delightful one for all who attended. No events of unusual importance occurred. One small boy furnished a bit of excitement by falling into the creek.

Comparing the Flavors of Canned and Bulk Coffee.

Any coffee that you like is, for you, good coffee. However, we find that individual taste in coffee flavors is largely governed by what one is accustomed to, and is therefore something that admits of cultivation. It is this that we wish to discuss from the standpoint of canned coffee.

Last week we tried to show that unless the freshly roasted coffee is sealed in airtight cans, a considerable evaporation of the flavor elements will result. But the canning process not only preserves flavor-strength; it makes possible certain improvements in flavor-quality as well. To better understand this, let us consider bulk coffee for a moment.

We find that a high degree of roast brings out a rich flavor, but also results in a more rapid loss of this flavor thru age. Therefore well-roasted coffee has poor keeping qualities in bulk. For this reason the bulk goods are lightly browned—a sort of compromise between the practical and the ideal in roasting. It is this under-roasted coffee that we are used to; that we have learned to pronounce "good".

Now, it is evident that coffee sealed in airtight cans, because there is no flavor-loss thru evaporation, may be roasted to more nearly the ideal point of perfection. But we are accustomed to "under-roast" coffee and may not at first like the "high-roast" taste. It is the aim of A. Schilling & Company to gradually educate their patrons to a liking for the richer high-roast flavor. Consumers who acquire this taste will not thereafter be satisfied with anything less than the best.

BEFORE THE TROUBLES COME

Why It Is Easy for Housekeeper to Be Pleasant in the Early Morning Hours.

It was the first thing I noticed in the office of the busy man—a little square of pasteboard with this statement: "Be pleasant until ten o'clock in the morning and the rest of the day will take care of itself." Probably the thing that made it strike in at my first glance was the fact that it was after ten, and I had come to ask a favor of a busy man, a writer in the Indianapolis News says. If he stayed pleasant only till ten o'clock I wasn't certain of the successful outcome of my venture, but when he entered the little room I saw at a glance that his early morning attitude toward life had not yet worn off. He was kind, courteous, gentlemanly, and I shall remember him as living up to his motto.

But would it work under all conditions? I'd hate to say that it isn't true—the statement that if you're pleasant until ten o'clock the rest of the day will take care of itself—because the man who said it is gone, and can't argue the question with me, but I can say that maybe he hadn't tried it out in all trades. Take housekeeping, for instance! Nearly any housekeeper can be pleasant until ten o'clock, for it is after that time when things begin to happen. Who ever heard of dinner burning before 10 a. m.? Agents don't usually begin to ring the doorbell until about that time. Usually the telephone calls begin to come in after ten, notifying you that you must make your number of church calls immediately, get someone to help with your table at the next church supper, be sure to attend an important committee meeting, be at the next club meeting without fail, etc.

If unexpected friends or relatives are going to drop in for dinner it will be after ten o'clock. The postman brings all your bad news after ten. The afternoons bring more agents, and callers, welcome and unwelcome. The baby has the colic in the afternoon, if he's going to have it at all, and the next sized one is cross if he fails to get his nap, and the older ones come tramping in from school with muddy feet, noisy voices and empty stomachs. Then the man of the house may put in a call for a hurry-up supper so he can get to an important lodge meeting on time. In fact, it seems that all the nerve-racking, brain-fagging, back-breaking hours in the business of being a homemaker come after ten o'clock in the morning.

Maybe some day we will get started being so very, very pleasant early in the morning that it will be like sliding down a steep hill, impossible for us to stop—but some of us will have to have a right smart push to get us started.

When East Meets West.

An amusing illustration of the modesty of the Chinese in matters of dress is given by Elizabeth Cooper in her new book, "The Harim and the Purdah."

"When one of the imperial princes was en route to England," she writes, "he attended his first foreign dinner in Shanghai. About twenty-five of the guests were English and American ladies, dressed in their most elaborate gowns, which means extreme decollete.

"The attaches of the prince had tried to prepare his highness for the sight he was to witness, but they had evidently underestimated its startling qualities, because when the prince arrived and gave one amazed look at his hostess and the line of waiting ladies he was nonplused.

"He looked pitifully for his interpreter, and not receiving aid from him, put down his head, shut his eyes, and bravely stumbled around the room, groping blindly for each lady's hand, as he had been informed that he should shake hands with them."

Meant Well, But—

Viscount French of Ypres often tells an amusing story about a French review that he attended a good many years ago.

General French—as he then was—attended the men's dinner in camp one day, and as he puffed on his cigar he noticed that 300 young Frenchmen had nothing to smoke whatever.

Accordingly, he sent to his tent for three boxes of Havanas and these were quickly distributed among the troops. A rare treat, truly.

"Vive la Russia!"

They had mistaken the uniform.—Washington Star.

Minces Are Ripe.

Jay was spending the day with his grandmother. Being only three and one-half he was not allowed the variety of food that the grown-ups had. When dessert came and he was served with a diminutive piece of mince pie, his joy and surprise almost overcame him. With an air of ingratiating interest and dignity, he said, "Why, mamma, I didn't know minces were ripe."—Exchange.

Playground Is Now A Battleground

THE rising generation will know more of geography than any of its predecessors. Nothing teaches geography like war, more than any other, this war. South Africa, the Cameroons, East Africa, the Sinaitic peninsula, the Persian gulf, Armenia, the Dardanelles and all central Europe have been the scenes of dramatic events in which everyone has been forced to take interest. And those events have in every case been conditioned by the formation and climate of the countries in which they have occurred. The world scene of warfare has become real to us through the many detailed accounts printed by the newspapers and the memory of what has thus been impressed upon us will not soon pass away.

Nothing was further removed from the minds of most peace-time tourists in their wanderings than to look at the countries through which they passed as likely in their own day to be devastated by war. Occasionally one becomes conscious of the existence of forts in recondite lofty positions, but these he was not permitted to approach and seldom wanted to. If he crossed the Brenner by railway from Innsbruck to Italy he could scarcely avoid noticing the fortifications of Franzensfeste, but why they should be there and what they were expected to attain—as to all that the mere tourist thought little and cared less. For no landscape in the world is less suggestive of war than a mountain landscape. Nature seems to have built up mountains to keep hostile people apart. She might have done the work a great deal better. Why did she leave here and there such notable gaps in their ranges? Why did she spread those ranges out so widely from side to side, and dip into them such attractive valley approaches?

Form No Racial Boundary.

There is hardly a mountain range in the world that does not invite men to traverse it somewhere. The Alps are particularly thus breached, with the result that for all their formidable appearance they have as often connected as sundered the peoples on either side of them. They form today no racial boundary. From the earliest ages the people in the north have pressed down over them and even the loftiest Italian valleys on the south slope of Monte Rosa itself are colonized by a Teutonic stock. Thus it happens that the Italian Ticino and Italian Tyrol both remain under Teutonic government and the frontier of the Alps has never, in fact, been the political frontier of Italy.

The Alpine playground of Europe takes a great deal of knowing. In a visitor's first season the great snow mountains impose their eminence upon him, and if he is likewise a climber he will have little attention to spare for valleys, but will spend his wonder upon the glaciers and the high crags and the great phenomena of the central mountains. But when the first flush of novelty has passed from them the maturer lover of the Alps finds delights no less keen at lower levels. The valleys have each a character of their own and the mountains themselves are not all alike. There are mountains built of crystalline rock and others of limestones of different qualities and colors. It is not necessarily the highest and hardest that take the firmest hold upon our affections.

The great Matterhorns and Schreckhorns are always glorious, but so are the smaller peaks of the Maritimes, of the graceful Cottians, or of recondite Dauphine. To each region there is a charm all its own. And as with the peaks, so with the valleys. The better we come to know them the more varied do we find them. We soon learn to divide them into two main contrasting groups: Those that incline northward, mainly into German lands, and those that bend south down to the rich Italian plain, and these latter are far more charming than the others.

Are Essentially Different.

In ancient days the region north of the Alps was mainly a dense forest. South of them has always been the open fertile Italian plain. The winds from the north were dry and cold; those from the south warm and laden with fertilizing moisture. Thus nature herself imposed a different atmosphere upon these two sundered regions; and though now, on both sides, the forests have been driven aloft and the lands suitable for it have been tamed beneath the plow, the essential difference abides. Fertile Italy climbs aloft from one side; strenuous Germany from the other. The very domestic architecture proclaims the difference. The Italian valleys of the Alps are old friends of the sun and of the vine. Bacchus and Pan are there at home. They seem to open to the visitor a warm heart. Even where the lemon cannot bloom the scent of it seems to penetrate. The southern valleys always seem to draw one from the Alpine heights as those to the north never can, You may not be able to see the Mediterranean far to the south, but you know and seem to feel that it is there, and thither you are impelled by the strange force that has drawn the men of the north southward since the days when the Dorians swept down upon the Aegean and long before.

This southward tendency it was that brought the Germans over into Italy—the Franks under Charlemagne, the Ottonians and the Hohenstaufen later—and it is the remnant of their conquests of Italian soil that Italy is now seeking to rend from the grasp of the Hapsburgs.

A glance at the map shows that tongue of hill country, by nature Italian, which Austria holds—the west side of it stretching down due south from near the Stelvio to the head of Lake Garda, whence its eastern boundary slopes northeastward up to the ridge of the Carnic Alps. Within this triangle is contained one of the loveliest hill countries in the world. The great snowy groups of Ortler, Oetzthal, Zillerthal and the Tauern do not belong to it. They are essentially German, these severe crystalline ranges. But all that is below—the smiling valleys, the crimsoned limestone peaks and walls of the Dolomites, the rich valleys that drain into the Adige or into Garda—these are Italian, Italian in atmosphere, in color, in vegetation, in architecture, in language and sentiment, and whatever else gives character to a land.

To the traveler it is the Dolomite mountains rather than the folk or any other feature that distinguish this region. They are in their way good to climb, but they are far more wonderful to look at. Half a century ago their peaks were mostly untrodden; now guns have been mounted upon points whose first ascent may have been proudly chronicled within the memory of living men.

DRIVING AWAY DEMONS

ANCIENT CEREMONY RECENTLY HELD IN JAPAN.

Superstition Dying Slowly in the Empire of the Mikado—Has Been an Annual Custom for Twelve Hundred Years.

Ceremonies were held recently throughout the Japanese empire—in household, shrine and temple—to drive away the demons of ill-fortune. The date corresponds to the old Chinese New Year, marking the transition from winter to spring under the ancient calendar.

Tradition long observed in Japan holds the demons of ill luck may be kept away during the year by pelting them with hard beans and by hanging outside the door a branch of hollyhock and the head of a herring. The idea is that the herring, whose odor is distasteful to the demon, will keep the evil one from entering the house, and that if he succeeds in entering he will be blinded by the beans. Each member of the household takes as many beans as he has years, and throws them in all directions and in all the rooms of his house.

It was about 1,200 years ago, during the reign of the Emperor Monbu that the first ceremony of demon removing was held in Japan. Adopting the rite from China, the emperor incorporated it with the object of stamping out an epidemic that raged throughout the land.

The recent modern celebration was like this: Toward evening housewives become busy preparing for the celebration; beans are crackling in kettles and feasts are prepared for the family god and the family. Meanwhile the husbands clean the shrine, light the sacred lights and burn incense, while awaiting the beans and the feast.

Parched beans are offered in a wooden box to the family god, and the family clap their hands and reverently bow before the shrine. Then the master carrying the box of beans, starts round his house, followed by his children to pelt out the demons of misfortune. When he throws beans toward the direction of the god of good fortune he cries out: "Come in, fortune!" and when he pelts toward the other direction he shouts: "Go out, demons!" Children gather the scattered beans and vie with each other in seeing who gets most.

There is a superstition regarding the word "bean" which may explain why it plays such a part in the ceremony. The Japanese for "bean" is "mame" and "mame" means "health." Therefore the bean is the emblem of good fortune.

In Uniform.

It seems that over there where the war is, if any civilian goes to the front, upon any of the grave missions which permit a civilian to get within the lines, he thinks it necessary to adopt a sort of uniform. He rigs himself up like a Richard Harding Davis war correspondent, in riding breeches and the leggings that go with them. Not long ago, according to report, two high officials of the civilian administration in Paris went to view the trenches on official business—more or less. Both followed the fashion. M. S—— was equipped with fine molded pigskin leggings, M. L—— wore puttees, the kind that wrap round and round in spirals.

A general and a couple of colonels were on hand to receive the eminent visitors when they left the train at the last station behind the front. As they dismounted from the special compartment it was observed that M. S—— had his leggings on backwards, giving the extraordinary effect of wearing the calves of his legs in front, while M. L—— had not taken five steps before his puttees came unwound, and trailed sadly upon the earth, revealing a pair of slender shins garnished with stockings of tender purple silk. The general and the colonels did not even dare to laugh.

Germans Use New Kind of Shell.

The Germans in the Dvinsk regions are using a new shell, which has a cast-iron nose grooved internally and with a central opening nearly one inch in diameter, from which, several hours after the shell has burst, there still comes a strong odor of prussic acid.

The shell, which is provided with an arrangement to delay the explosion, generally bursts on the ground. Wounds of the slightest character from fragments of these shells, inevitably and usually very rapidly, cause death.

Real Harbinger of Spring.

The groundhog is accepted by many as giving the first clue to when spring may be expected. Others wait for the robin, but all will concede that among the real harbingers of spring is the small boy playing "keeps." When the genuine vernal spirit is in the air it unerringly is manifested by Young America who instinctively turns to marbles. The fever is not on him long, but it is never-failing and always coincident with the break-up of winter.

Give Libraries to War Victims.

When the Russians invaded East Prussia they destroyed every library in the villages and cities they occupied so the inhabitants are left without books. The Berliner Goethebund has started a subscription to restore the books. Herr Krupp von Bohlen headed it with $1,250.

New Columbia River Highway

WITH the building of the Columbia River highway through the gorge of the famous Columbia river, a paved driveway has been provided along the precipitous sides of the gorge and making this section of Oregon passable for the first time in history for automobiles and all other vehicles. The national dedication of the roadway comes June 7, opening day of Portland's tenth annual rose festival.

The building of a highway through the gorge of the river has been a dream of years until two years ago the work was taken up by public-spirited citizens, with the result that the highway, hard-surfaced from Portland to the Multnomah county line, is ready for the tourist and represents an investment in road-building of a sum exceeding $2,000,000.

In making passable the gorge for automobiles, there has been opened up a new viewpoint for the scenic beauties of the Columbia river. For miles are cliffs, waterfalls and virgin forests through which the highway winds. In many places it hangs to the cliffs hundreds of feet above the river, its concrete and steel bridges spanning turbulent streams, supported by artistic walls of dry masonry for miles of its length.

The gorge was the home of Indian tribes in the early days, a fastness where they were safe from enemies. It was the scene of the fabled Bridge of the Gods, and around its scenic grandeur many Indian fables were drawn. Leaving Crown Point the highway enters the district which has given it the title, "The Road of the Falling Waters."

Many Picturesque Waterfalls.

In ten miles' travel 11 waterfalls are passed, the highest being Multnomah falls, second highest in the United States. Latourelle falls, Sheppards Dell, Bridal Veil, Coopey falls, Dalton falls, Mist falls, Wahkeena falls, Benson park and Multnomah falls, Oneonta gorge, where a subterranean stream sends air blasts along rocks; Horsetail falls, Cathedral point, St. Peter's dome pass in quick succession, and the tourist reaches Bonneville, the home of the greatest fish hatchery in the world. Then on through the tunnel at Mitchell's Point to the sunken forests of the Columbia, where giant trees are seen beneath the waters; to the petrified forests at Tanner's creek, with 200-foot trees; to the abutments of the Bridge of Gods, passing numerous fish wheels, and into the Hood river valley. From there the tourist finds the call of Mount Hood imperative and its tremendous glaciers are reached conveniently.

Crown Point, where the new roadway makes a turn 700 feet above the river, has been selected as the site for the memorial to the pioneers of the state who encountered untold hardships of early days in the settlement of this vast country. Crown Point is where the new highway makes a turn and then drops 500 feet in two miles, forming a perfect figure eight on a grade not to exceed 5 per cent, one of the most remarkable feats of engineering in the country.

While the highway already reaches west from Portland to the Pacific ocean beaches and east to central Oregon, the 40-mile stretch through the gorge of the Columbia from Portland to the Multnomah county line has made possible a view of the picturesque gorge from an automobile. Before the completion of the hard-surfacing of the roadway, in the fall of 1915, thousands of tourists, en route to or returning from the expositions in California, inspected the new highway and marveled at its beauties.

Model in Road Construction.

The Columbia River highway is one of the best illustrations of modern road construction to be found anywhere. Permanency, grade, location and drainage were the essential elements considered in the location of the highway. With a width of 24 feet, a maximum radius of 200 feet, bridges, viaducts, culverts of concrete, all danger points protected by stone and concrete walls, the highway, in engineering and construction now presents the very highest type of modern roadbuilding. There were many engineering problems presented, such as the descent from Crown Point to Latourelle, a drop of 500 feet in less than two miles, yet keeping within the maximum grade of 5 per cent. This was done by a sort of switchback making a perfect figure 8, the road paralleling itself five times. Several miles further on, at Oneonta gorge, a solid rock precipice barred the way and a tunnel 100 feet long was bored. The excessive rainfall necessitated much attention to drainage, and long stretches of concrete-lined ditches and pipes line the road. To reduce the chances of slides where cuts were necessary, great walls of dry masonry were constructed and seeds of grass were sown to hold the earth intact. Everything that could add to the beauty and permanency of the highway was taken into consideration.

The United States government has recently set aside more than 14,000 acres of land from the Oregon national forest for park and recreation purposes. This land parallels the highway and will forever retain countless beauty spots for the use of the people. Tourists who journey west over the Lincoln highway, or in fact any of the roads through Utah, Idaho or Montana, will find good automobile roads leading to the new Columbia River highway.

Notwithstanding the cost of the highway has been enormous, it is already looked upon as the state's greatest asset from a tourist standpoint, and one of the best investments ever made by an American municipality.

GUIDEBOOK IN MUCH DEMAND

Caxton's Famous Works Most Sought After by Collectors—Throws Light on Traveling.

The guidebook most sought after by collectors is "Information for Pylgrymes Unto the Holy Londe," which is valuable because of the light it throws on fifteenth century traveling, and still more because it was printed by Caxton. The father of English printing was a practical man, who set himself to produce books for which there was a demand, while other early printers ruined themselves by printing luxurious editions of classics that lay in their warehouses unsold.

His guidebook scrupulously sets out all that was needed in order to make a pilgrimage as cheaply and comfortably as possible. There were two routes to Venice—then the favorite port for Jerusalem pilgrims—and Caxton gives the itineraries of both. He advises those who can afford it to travel from Venice to Jaffa in a galley, the return fare being 50 ducats, and shows how all the places of interest in Palestine could be seen in fourteen days.—London Chronicle.

His Grouchy Views.

"What has become of the fine old names like Prudence and Patience?"

"They wouldn't be appropriated now," declared the old grouch. "If I had a couple of daughters I'd name 'em Extravagance and Hysteria."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Bobby Knew.

Uncle Ernest (improving the shining hour)—And what do we do with the flesh of the whale?

Bobby—Eat it.

Uncle Ernest (sarcastically)—Oh, do we! And what do we do with the bones?

Bobby—Put 'em on the edge of the plate.—London Sketch.

TREATMENT OF WAR VETERAN

Bed He Was Compelled to Sleep on Was Uncomfortable, but Was Well Supplied With Legs.

An army officer said at a dinner: "The mutilated young heroes of the world war will be very finely treated for a few years; then afterward they will be treated no better, but probably worse, than anybody else.

"Look at our own Civil war veterans. Nothing very wonderful about their treatment, eh?

"I remember a Civil war veteran with one leg who went to Ocean Grove one summer. His bedroom was clean, but the bed was most uncomfortable, and in the morning he said to his landlady:

"'I couldn't sleep last night, ma'am. The room was clean, but the bed was more uncomfortable than the rocky fields I used to sleep in on my campaigns. The bed, in fact, is unsteady, ma'am. It has only three legs.'

"'Only got three legs, eh?' sneered the landlady. 'Well, you old groucher, that's two more'n you've got!'"

Left Behind.

"When I wuz a young man, mum, de neighbors where I lived called me a 'human dynamo,'" said the languid looking tramp.

"Well, they wouldn't call you that now," answered the housewife.

"No'm. But I wuz like a dynamo in one respect."

"How was that?"

"The energy I created never got me anywhere."

Progress.

"Why should women want the vote?" asked Mr. Twobble fretfully. "Don't they run everything now to suit themselves?"

"Only within certain limits," replied Mrs. Twobble. "To the average woman of intelligence bossing a husband is such child's play that unless she expands her zone of activities she is apt to retrograde."

Ancient Anecdotes.

"What sort of fellow is Dubwaite?"

"The kind of man who starts to tell a funny story and then forgets how it ends."

"Do you feel like hitting him then?"

"Yes, but I don't miss much. The story is usually so old that I know now it ends myself."

DIFFERENT THEN.

Hubby—It's strange that I can never find anything about the house that belongs to me without your assistance.

Wifey—How did you manage before we were married, dear?

Hubby—Oh! things stayed where I put them then.

But They Don't Pay a Rentette.

"So you were up to see the Newlyweds. What do you think of their flat?"

"Flat? It's merely a flatette, consisting of kitchenette, parlorette, chamberette and bathlette."

Quick Action.

"Was your new play a go?" asked the friend of the would-be author.

"Yes; that was the trouble," replied the other. "I was in hopes it would stay for a week at least."

Then They Might Be Girls.

Nurse—It's twins, sir.

Father—Holy Moses and Jumpin' Jehosephat!

Nurse—Oh, no; we haven't named them yet.

Nothing Lacking.

"Are you careful about possible ptomaines in your ice cream?"

"You bet, we insist on them. We have everything up to date that's going."

STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSILVER

It's mercury! Attacks the bones, salivates and makes you sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.—Adv.

HOW TO HEAL ITCHING, BURNING SKIN DISEASES

A Baltimore doctor suggests this simple, but reliable and inexpensive, home treatment for people suffering with eczema, ringworm, rashes and similar itching, burning skin troubles.

At any reliable druggist's get a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap. These are not at all expensive. With the Resinol Soap and warm water bathe the affected parts thoroughly, until they are free from crusts and the skin is softened. Dry very gently, spread on a thin layer of the Resinol Ointment, and cover with a light bandage—if necessary to protect the clothing. This should be done twice a day. Usually the distressing itching and burning stop with the first treatment, and the skin soon becomes clear and healthy again.—Adv.

A Famous Physician's Wonderful Discovery

After a series of careful experiments and tests at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., covering many years—Dr. Pierce, the medical director of that hospital made announcement that he could prove that a medicine which he called "ANURIC" was the best uric acid solvent now to be had. As a remedy for those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation—as scalding urine, backache and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, gout, it is simply wonderful how quickly "Anuric" acts; causing the pains and stiffness rapidly to disappear.

Swollen hands, ankles, feet are due to a dropsical condition, often caused by disordered kidneys. Naturally when the kidneys are deranged the blood is filled with poisonous waste matter, which settles in the feet, ankles and wrists; or under the eyes in bag-like formations.

It is just as necessary to keep the kidneys acting properly as to keep the bowels active.

The very best possible way to take care of yourself is to take a glass of hot water before meals and an "Anuric" tablet. In this way it is readily dissolved with the food, picked up by the blood and finally reaches the kidneys, where it has a tonic effect in rebuilding those organs.

Step into the drug store and ask for a 50-cent package of "Anuric" or send Dr. Pierce 10c. for trial pckg. "Anuric"—many times more potent than lithia, eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar. A short trial will convince you.

Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine —Here is More Proof.

To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

North Crandon, Wis.—"When I was 16 years old I got married and at 18 years I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was hard for me to keep about and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it made me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. Mayme Asbach, North Crandon, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla.—"When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tired easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I took it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me."—Mrs. A. L. McCasland, 509 Have St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.

Roxbury, Mass.—"I was suffering from inflammation and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were bearing down pains, backache, and sluggish liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it."—Mrs. B. M. Osgood, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Mrs. Cowles at Sea

R. M. S. Saxon, Jan. 3, '16

Dear Friends,-

Sizzling on the Equator now. At least we are on it or just over it, and it meets all our expectations. For two days we have been steaming, stewing, boiling, night and day. Prickly heat and all the other hot weather luxuries are our lot, but worst of all are the breathless nights down in our cabins. It is awful, and for the babies doubly so. We shall strike the trade winds in a day or two, and the worst will be over. In the meantime the whole ship-full endures.

We are off the Gulf of Guinea today, way, way out of sight of land of course. So far out that not a bird follows us, not even a sea gull, only flying-fish to remind us of any life save that on this ship. The silvery flying fish are darting out of the water constantly. I love to watch them as they rob over the surface of the water, hitting it here and there with a splash and then with a final dive, disappearing. It reminds one of boys skipping stones over a pond, and the water has been really pond-like, trully a silvery sea. An "oily sea", I hear our English friends call it. That doesn't sound poetic, but it describes it well.

Our good old boat is almost as steady as a house and I am thankful to say, Mr. Cowles seems at last to have recovered from his sea-sickness and is really enjoying life for the first time since we left America. Frederick too, is picking up at last and making up for lost time, with an insatiable appetite.

Every sort of sport is on the program each day now. Most people seem to crave incessant activity. For my part I am only too thankful for a chance to sit still and improve the one chance of my life to be lazy. Quoits are going all day long and dances and concerts keep the evenings full for those who must do something every minute. We attended a deck concert last evening. For the most part it was very good, but disgusting in the abbreviated clothing which some women wore. Cigarette smoking is very common among the women. In the ladies salon of the first class, I noticed matches and brass cigar holders on the tables. One of the first class ladies was very much put out because the men smoked in the ladies salon. I remarked that they could hardly be expected to do otherwise when provision was made for it. She replied, "Oh, all the ladies smoke. These matches are provided for the ladies." Later, I saw a first class lady leaning over the railing which separates us second class mortals from the first, and between her dainty fingers she held a cigarette. I'll not make any remarks.

There are a number of missionaries on board and all in the second class, so we are having delightful companionship. There are also a goodly number of children so Frederick eats at the children's table and at last has simple, suitable food. We also have on board about 200 officers and soldiers, bound for German East Africa. Commissioned officers are in the first class and non-commissioned in the second with us and privates in the third. Their commander is ill with pneumonia. A soldier stands guard at his door and a nurse is in constant attendance. He has begun to improve we are told.

Soldiers and passengers attended services together in our dining saloon and in the evening we all had a service on the "well deck", out under the open canopy of heaven. Both services were Church of England, of course. The one in the morning was conducted by the captain and the evening service by the soldiers' chaplain. There was something tremendously sad about it. To stand up beside men in kahki and sing hymns with those who so soon are undoubtedly to be shot down. Somehow it is hard to sing, especially when the hymn asks for God's care for the loved ones far away. The men sang well and were evidently quite familiar with the hymns.

Such beautiful boys, some of them, handsome and so young. To look at them keeps one in a perpetual state of heartbreak for all their mothers. And oh to think of such men being butchered. We in America do not know the half of it. One of our best friends on board is a captain in the army. He has just returned from the trenches on the firing line. He is now on two months sick leave and has been offered the position of Major as soon as he re-enlists. Captain James is a magnificent Christian as well as soldier. He is telling us stories which make one's blood grow cold. (Just here as I write, the soldiers on the deck above are singing "Tipperary". Poor things.)

Mr. James was one of six officers sent to the front. All were shot except himself and one other. On all sides we hear horrible stories of German atrocities and that by eye witnesses. They tell of babies with ears cut off, pinioned on swords, etc., all too fiendish to believe possible, but one can't disbelieve eye witnesses. It seems it is true that Germans now shoot wounded British soldiers to save themselves the expense of caring for them! At Madeira we were told that the Germans interned there had a grand banquet in celebration of the sinking of the Lusitania.

On the trip which took us from the shore at Madeira to our boat, I sat beside a man and his wife who were refugees from Belgium. They said conditions in Belgium were so awful they were leaving and going to South Africa to live. They also remarked that America had done a great deal for Belgium but the Germans had eaten half the provisions sent!

There is no talc of peace here, not even among English Christians.

Did I tell you of the two huge gunboats at Madeira? They are stationed there to keep a watchful eye over three or four German boats which have been interned there since the war began. We saw these cruisers going out to sea every day or two, then they would return, firing off salutes on their arrival each time. Of course the German boats did not dare to stir even in the absence of the gun boats, for had they begun to provision for a voyage, wireless would have communicated with the cruisers, and bang, bang would have been the result. I could think of nothing but great greyhounds keeping their prey at bay.

THE GRAMMAR SCHOOL Board has issued a notice of bond election to be held at the Grammar school Saturday, May 20, for the purpose of raising funds for a new school building. This is the third call for this purpose the Board has made and it rests with the voters to say whether it shall be the last, for something must be done at once. This is one of the most progressive communities to be found in this valley on most lines, but in the matter of school building, we are behind the rest. The district has needed a new building for three years and the crowded condition this year has been literally "the limit."

The plan of building and location were worked out by a representative committee in conjunction with the Board, and at the mass meeting, it was decided to submit the proposition for a $20,000 bond issue. At the last meeting of the Improvement Club, the action of the committee and mass meeting was endorsed without a dissenting vote What is needed now is the endorsement of the voters, whose duty it is to go and vote.

Co-operation in the truest sense is the thing most wanted now. Real co-operation is not demanding that your ideas be supported by the other fellow but that you acknowledge that the other fellow has good ones and that you support the proposition that will benefit the greater number.

Nothing can be done that entirely coincides with everyone's plans, but each must concede something, and all work for the common good.

Nothing means as much for the public welfare as the school, therefore it is deserving of our unselfish support.

Flower Show? Sure!

Much interest is being manifested in the Chrysanthemum Show or Autumn Fete, which the Country-Woman's Club will hold this fall. The Club is desirous of securing the assistance of the residents of Campbell and the surrounding district in this undertaking. There are many successful flower culturists in this vicinity whose help is solicited to make this a display of which we may be proud.

Los Gatos has had a Flower Show, so has Hollister. Menlo Park is on the list for one and San Jose has had several at the Chamber of Commerce. Civic pride should induce everyone to do what he or she can to make Campbell's a success.

Addressed Grange

Pomona Grange held its monthly session at Campbell Saturday where it was entertained by Orchard City Grange and tendered a most bountiful banquet prepared by the good cooks of the order.

The lecture hour was an open meeting which visitors attended. The principal feature at this hour was the paper given by Geo. E. Hyde of the Geo. E. Hyde Packing Co. of Campbell. Mr. Hyde gave an interesting history of the introduction and early culture and treatment of prunes in this valley. His advice to the grower as to curing of the fruit was most valuable and he urged them to work in closer harmony with the packers to obtain the best results in marketing the crop. It was one of the best papers of its kind ever given before the Grange. A general discussion followed led by E. K. Clendenning and H. G. Keesling.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.
